Ice.

THE British Admiralty has given notice (No. 323 of 1900) that information has been received through the Board of Trade that the British S.S. Ness, when on a voyage from Portland, Oregon, to Vladivostock, encountered a large quantity of field ice on 18th March 1900, off the coast of Yezo island, in approximately lat. 42° 36' N., long. 146° 18' E., and continued meeting ice until in lat. 42° 0' N., long. 144° 25' E.

It is also reported that ice in this neighbourhood was met by another steamship in February 1900 when proceeding from Vancouver to Vladivostock.

It is known that ice may be encountered during the winter months in Yezo strait, Kunashiri channel, and Yotorup strait, but this is the first time it has been reported so far from the shore. This is probably owing to the fact that few ships have hitherto made a passage from the Western ports of North America towards Tsugaru strait in the winter. It is not unlikely that ice may be quite common in this vicinity in the winter.

Ice.

THE British Admiralty has given notice (No. 323 of 1900) that information has been received through the Board of Trade that the British S.S. Ness, when on a voyage from Portland, Oregon, to Vladivostok, encountered a large quantity of field ice on 18th March 1900, off the coast of Yezo island, in approximately lat. 42° 36' N., long. 146° 18' E., and continued meeting ice until in lat. 42° 0' N., long. 144° 25' E.

It is also reported that ice in this neighbourhood was met by another steamship in February 1900 when proceeding from Vancouver to Vladivostok.

It is known that ice may be encountered during the winter months in Yezo strait, Kunashiri channel, and Yotorup strait, but this is the first time it has been reported so far from the shore. This is probably owing to the fact that few ships have hitherto made a passage from the Western ports of North America towards Tsugaru strait in the winter. It is not unlikely that ice may be quite common in this vicinity in the winter.

" 19th	185	8vo d.c.	1st...	500	ditto ...	1 8 0	B. D. Gupta, Sub-Deputy Collector, Jessore.	Is a farcical sketch of the serio-comic side of the settlement officer's work in jungle tracts. It is intended to show the hardship of the Ameen's life, the ill-treatment and oppression he is alleged to suffer at the hands of his official superiors and the wild people of the hills, the shifts and dodges he has recourse to in order to keep his body and soul together, and the utterly perfunctory way in which settlement disputes are supposed to be disposed of. Although a farce in form and language, a deep pathos runs through the book and no one reading it can help sympathising with the poor Ameen. The writer's views on the subject may be gathered from the following "equation of Ameenship" given in the book:— viz (Work + Caning - Salary) × Jail = Ameenship. The writer is an officer of Government employed on settlement work, and as such, appears to speak with the authority of personal knowledge.	7

Nov. 10th	74	8vo dy	1st...	1,000	Printed.	0 8 0	S. B. Pál, 97, Durgá Charan Mitra's Street, Calcutta.	Is a mythological drama describing the establishment at Puri by the divine artist Visvakarmá, of the shrine and temple of Jagannáth, with a view to counteract the mischievous influence of Kali (the presiding god of the present Iron age). It is an extremely silly production.	8

Jan. 20th	72	12mo dy	2nd...	1,000	ditto ...	0 8 0	The publisher 104, Beenden Street, Calcutta	Gives in the form of a dialogue the common-place story of a youngman's reception at the house of his farther-in-law.	9
" 27th	20	12mo dy	1st...	100	ditto	Navin Chandra Sen, Comilla.	Written in celebration of an aristocratic marriage in Chit-tagong. Heavenly nymphs are represented in the play, as presenting the newly married couple with a garland of celestial flowers which the goddess Durgá had prepared with her own hands and hence the name of the play.	10
Feb. 5th	104	12mo dy	1st...	1,000	ditto ...	0 8 0	The author, 51, Nimitala Street, Calcutta.	The story of a drunken zamindar, his scape-grace son and boon-companions, told in the form of a dialogue. It abounds in low, vulgar sketches, and is altogether unfit for perusal.	11
Mar. 3rd	74	12mo dy	1st...	1,000	ditto ...	0 6 0	Vihári Lál Datta	Is a social farce directed against female education; and female emancipation movements. The plot is as follows:—Nader Chánd of the oilman caste, which is one of the lowest in the Hindu social hierarchy, aspired for the hand of the Brahmin girl Fulkumári. Her parents, who were thoroughly heterodox in their manners and customs, gave their consent to the match for a good consideration; but the girl, who was by education and association an English girl, looked upon it with horror. A relation of her farther's, Harihar, was also opposed to the match on social and religious considerations. He induces an actress to play the rôle of a young man and try to attract Fulkumári's attention. The plan succeeds, and the girl mistaking the actress for a youth, elopes with her on the eve of her marriage. As her parents had received from Nader Chánd the consideration for which they were willing to sell her, the news of her elopement made them uncomfortable. Harihar now came to their rescue, explained the situation and produced Fulkumári and her actress-lover. There was now nothing left for the couple but to return the money to Nader Chánd and to ponder at liesure on the unwisdom and impropriety of bringing up their daughter like an English girl and educating her on purely western lines. The picture of Hindu Society presented in the play is unreal, and many of the incidents greatly overdone. The writer, nevertheless, is not without power.	12
Dec. 19th	74	12mody	1st...	1,000	ditto ...	0 8 0	The author, Minerva Theatre, Calcutta.	Purports to be a satire on female education and female emancipation movements. It represents a number of young men and women, as acting on the stage, after the most approved fashion of the day, scenes from Krishna's life in Vrindávan; and the lady who takes the rôle of Rádhiká is styled Encore 99, or Srimati. This explains the title of the book. Srimati which is the name of Rádhika, is intelligible enough, but why she should be styled Encore 99 cannot be easily made out. There is apparently here a covert allusion to the manners and morals of the advanced woman of the day.	13
Jan. 7th	172	8vo dy.	1st...	1,250	ditto ...	0 8 0	Kedár Náth Visvás, 86, Abiritolá Street, Calcutta.	The mythological story of King Kansa's defeat and death by the hand of Krishna.	14

the vicissitudes which befell the hero Sailendra Nath and his sister Kanchanabala before they became suitably settled in life. It is a typically Indian story, in which everything turns out at the end to the entire satisfaction of the hero and the heroine concerned. The book is very indifferently written, and there is absolutely nothing to commend either in the story or in the manner of telling it.

1899.	Pages.					Rs. A. P.
Dec. 16th	119	12mo dy	1st...	1,000	Printed.	0 12 0	Is an extremely silly story of love and adventure, of which the scene is laid in Viranagar in Odeypur in the days of Amar Sinha, son of the Mahārānā Pratāp Sinha. It describes how the girl Svarna Kumārī, who was intended by the Mahārānā for one of his chieftains named Bhīm Sinha, was at the end fortunate enough to get herself married to the youth of her heart, Samar Sinha. The language of the book is as faulty as the plot is incoherent and improbable.	26

Is a collection of letters and court-papers purporting to relate to the story of a dispute about the possession of the Janārdan-gar Rāj in Bengal. The scene of the story is laid in the days of Sirāj-ud-daulā, and there is an attempt at imitating, in many of the letters, the archaic style, which prevailed in the latter half of the eighteenth and the beginning of the nineteenth century.	28

There is nothing remarkable either in the conception or in the development of the plot. The book is called after the wife of the hero, AtulChandra, whose virtues serve to bring the vices of his rival Chhidām into prominence.	31

Feb. 2nd	91	12mo dy	1st...	2,000	Printed.	1 0 0	The Publisher, 105, Upper Chitpur Road, Calcutta.	Is the story of the Brahmin girl Mrinalini and her lover Raman Chandra as told by themselves. They loved each other dearly from infancy, but as the girl was poor and fatherless and Raman a richman's son, the marriage between the two was thought out of the question. Mrinalini was accordingly married, much against her wish, to a man of her own rank in life. He was over forty	41 and subjected his wife to gross ill-treatment. She fled from his house, took shelter with a Brahmo couple, was taken by them to Calcutta and married a second time to a Brahmo youth. Her new husband sent her to England to study medicine and she stayed there for three years. While in England, her beauty was much appreciated and she was styled "Queen" by her numerous admirers. Coming back, she resumed her correspondence with Raman Chandra, visited him at his house one night and remained there till morning. It will have been seen from the above that the heroine is not a very lovable character and her character and conduct will not bear looking into. The writer's statement in the preface that he is 'bred up' in England is amply borne out by his ungrammatical and unidiomatic Bengali, while his inability to impart a single Hindu trait to his heroine betrays the defects of his education. Altogether the book is immoral and mischievous in its tendency.

" 13th	170	12mo dy	1st...	1,000	ditto...	1 0 0	The Author, Champatala, Calcutta.	Is a well-written story of domestic life describing how Sures Chandra personated his brother Nagendra Nath with the object of defrauding him of the property left him by his uncle Prasanna Kumar, and how at the end, the fraud	44 was detected, and Sures committed suicide to avoid disgrace. The real interest of the story, however, centres round the conduct of Nagendra Nath's chaste wife Nirmala. Both the brothers had been away from their native village for a long time, and when Sures turned up and passed for his brother Nagendra, pressure was brought on Nirmala by her un-suspecting parents to accept him as her husband. But she doubting the new-comer's identity resisted all pressure and even risked her life to keep her virtue intact. The book is full of vivid realistic sketches of Bengali female life and the characters of Nirmala, Nagendra Nath and Dr. Abhay Charan are well-drawn. It is written in good, readable Bengali, although very indifferently got up.

Jan. 23rd	149	32mo sr l	1st...	1,000	Printed.	0 4 0	Nilmani Mukherji, 20, Amherst Street, Calcutta.	Is a collection of spiritual and devotional songs in honour of the goddess Syāma or Kālī, which were composed within about the last 150 years by the scions of some of the well-known princely families of Bengal, and in one instance, by a ruling chief of Cooch Behar. order of things, which are indulged in by many people in this country. The writer is apparently a man of enlightened ideas and he can not put up with the cant and hypocrisy which, as he thinks, are often at the root of these denunciations.

(1) that Bengalis are non-Aryans; (2) that the worship of the formless God is impossible, and (3) that it is to the interest and advantage of Bengalis that they should have one religion, one dress and one caste or colour among them. The book is a tissue of nonsense from beginning to end, with a grain of common sense only here and there.

" 28th	149	8vo dy	1st...	500	ditto ...	1 4 0	The publisher, 23, Raja Nava Krishna's Street, Calcutta.	Is an extremely interesting and original exposition of the principles of Sankhya Philosophy, based mainly on the aphorisms of Kapila and	163 differing fundamentally from the views of standard authors on the subject. This attempt to look beyond the traditional interpretation and to substitute in place of it, views and ideas which are possibly suggested by the writings of European authors must always be looked upon with suspicion. There are moreover difficulties in the writer's exposition which will have to be taken into consideration in forming a correct estimate of the value of his labours. Be that value as it may, there is no denying that the book contains evidence of clear thinking, close reasoning, and an honest and fearless devotion to truth, which is rarely met with in an equal degree in the writings of any other Bengali author of the present day. The writer's untimely death has been a great loss to Bengali literature.
Feb. 9th	258	8vo dy	1st...	500	ditto	The author.	Is a collection of eight lectures, of which the first six deal with the fundamental principles of Vedánta, the various schools in which it is divided, and the proofs of the existence of the soul as a separate entity; while the last two contain a resumé of the first year's lectures. The lecturer is a very learned man and his exposition of the subject has the rare merit of being lucid and well-graduated in the extreme. The book is a mine of rare and interesting information relating not only to Vedánta, but also to other Hindu Schools of thought, and will no doubt meet with the appreciation which it deserves.	164
Jan. 16th	242	12mo dy	1st...	500	ditto ...	1 4 0	Is a discourse on the nature of self, non-self and the highest-self, based mainly on the principles of Vedantism and Chaitanyism. It starts from certain general propositions relating to self in its relation to non-self and attempts to evolve step by step the various stages leading to the final attainment of samádhi by self, which is described to be "the soul's eternal natural sleep." The language of the book is obscure, and it is very difficult to grasp the sense.	165

1900. Feb. 14th	180	8vo cr.	1st...	100	ditto ...	2 0 0	The author ...	Is a commonplace story of a Scotchman's success in life. Mac-Duncan, while a boy of 17,	4
was fired by a desire to better his condition and to make for himself a name in society. His lady-love and companion of childhood, Mary Livingstone, sympathised with his desire and encouraged him in all his plans. Undaunted by first failures, Duncan went to Calcutta and started the Himalayan Steam Navigation Company. It was the days of sailing ships and the company's steamer service changed the entire aspect of the trade of Calcutta and greatly enriched the promoters. Henceforth, Mr. Duncan's march to honour and fortune was rapid. He next married Mary Livingstone, whose love for him had served him in good stead at a trying point of his fortune. His next venture was the creation of an African company for the exploitation of the dark continent, and the success achieved by him in this direction was rewarded by a baronetcy and he came to be known as Lord Tana. The rest of his life was spent in furthering the interests of his native city and he died full of years and honours. The numerous digressions introduced in the story have only served to make it prolix and tedious reading. There is nothing remarkable either in the plot or in the manner of telling it.
